The Story of SALT

Salt has been used by humans for thousands of years, from food preservation to seasoning, and is recognized as a founding contributor to the development of civilization as we know it. And, just like the finest wine, salt has a terroir. The seawater, sun and the wind of a particular area all influence the colour, the shape, the texture and, most importantly, the flavour of the salt. Only along the parched east coast of Bali, where the dry season is that little bit longer, the sun possibly that little bit hotter, can Balinese sea salt be created.

For many centuries Kusamba Beach on the eastern shore of Bali has been known as a place where traditional salt farmers harvest their crop from the top surface of crystalized, unspoiled, sea water. Many generations have profited from Kusamba's unique geographical location, using their conventional method of organic harvesting, to produce the very best natural salt with a truly distinctive texture and delicate flavour.

On clear mornings, you will usually be able to catch a glimpse of the local fishermen going about their daily routines, preparing their nets and working together to haul their wooded "jukung" outriggers out to sea. Meanwhile, the salt farmers will usually be busy harvesting salt at plots nearby. Salt harvesting is a labour intensive process. The farmers make their way to and from the ocean with wooden or leather buckets weighing heavily on bamboo poles. They then splash the seawater in a rhythmic, almost hypnotising motion across raked sand. Within a few hours, the hot Balinese sun bakes the sand into flakes from which the salt is harvested and ready for use.

With more than 300 distinct ethnic groups calling Indonesia home, the archipelago has thousands of traditional recipes, and salt has a very important role in all their different cuisines. Based on such a deep history and gastronomic diversity, the team here at SALT restaurant create a stunning variety of dishes for your dining pleasure, using only the highest quality and freshest produce, such as the beautiful salt from Kusamba Beach.
