WELCOME TO THE "WORLD'S BEST SKI HOTEL"

Stein Eriksen Lodge is an authentic European lodge nestled mid-mountain at the acclaimed Deer Valley Resort in Park City, Utah. Named after Norwegian Olympic Gold Medal skier Stein Eriksen, the Lodge is known as a premiere year-round destination.

Easy to Access

Park City is a short and easy 45-minute ride from Salt Lake City International Airport, which offers over 900 daily scheduled flights to all major cities in North America and many direct international flights daily, and is served by 15 airlines. In Park City, visitors and residents enjoy access to world-class recreation, cultural activities, exceptional dining, and spectacular mountain backdrops year-round. Our mountain town is home to two world-renowned resorts: Deer Valley Resort and Park City Mountain Resort, both venues during the 2002 Olympic Winter Games.

Weather

Park City, Utah weather is ideal for a multitude of seasonally-based activities. The town peaks around 82 degrees in the hottest summer month, creating a temperate summer getaway. The temperatures cool to the low teens during the coldest part of the winter season, best for maintaining perfect snow conditions. Park City receives an average of 21 inches of rain per year and 340 inches of snowfall on average each winter season. The town boasts 229 average sunny days per year. Our seasonal weather makes this community the best destination for year-round adventure and travel.
