

Encompassing 1,700 acres amid New Hampshire's spectacular White Mountains, Mountain View Grand Resort & Spa offers guests the opportunity to immerse themselves in the beauty of nature and observe an array of fascinating bird species in their natural habitats.

A renowned birding destination, the White Mountains are celebrated for their rich diversity of habitats. From dense forests and alpine meadows to tranquil lakeshores and meandering river valleys, these varied ecosystems provide a haven for an array of bird species throughout the year. Here, you'll find bald eagles, peregrine falcons, and black-capped chickadees, just to name a few.

Whether you're an avid birdwatcher or a curious beginner, you'll have the opportunity to observe both resident birds and migratory species gracing our landscapes in different seasons. We are proud to partner with the Audubon Society to enhance your birdwatching adventures. With their expert guidance, you'll gain deeper insights into the fascinating world of our feathered friends. So, grab some binoculars and embark on a self-guided journey through our scenic trails.

Happy birding!

Your Ultimate Guide to Birdwatching

New Hampshire is home to approximately 425 bird species. For birdwatching enthusiasts looking to delve deeper into the avian world, the Birds A to Z website from the New Hampshire Audubon is an invaluable tool and perfect companion for your birdwatching adventures. This online resource features a growing collection of profiles on 210 species, with plans to eventually cover all birds regularly found in the state.

Did you know New Hampshire is home to several birding hotspots? To make sure you don't miss a thing, we recommend using the eBird hotspot site. This comprehensive resource provides detailed tips, descriptions, maps, and images for prime birding locations in Coos County and across the state. It will guide you to the best spots for observing a diverse array of bird species.

We would like to extend our heartfelt gratitude to the Audubon Society for their invaluable partnership in enriching the birdwatching experience at Mountain View Grand.

We encourage you to support the Audubon Society's vital work. Your donations help protect birds and their habitats, ensuring that future generations can continue to enjoy the beauty and diversity of our feathered friends.
